

Kenya: A Natural History

For its size, Kenya probably has the most diverse range of habitats of any country in Africa, if not the world. Within its borders there are alpine peaks, montane forests, high plateaux, savannas, lowland forests, coastal woodlands and wetlands, and a string of varied lakes in the Great Rift Valley. The range of wildlife to be found in the region is correspondingly diverse. Kenya: A Natural History - by Steve Spawls & Glenn Matthews - explores the wildlife and habitats in great detail and gives a thorough overview of Kenyas natural history.
