

How To Win At Fantasy Football in 2015 Without Listening To Anyone

Lets get the typical BS out of the way. Ive been playing competitive fantasy football for close to twenty years. I play in mostly big money entry leagues and a few hometown leagues with my buddies. I plan on playing close to ten leagues every year. Heres the thing, Ive always done well in all the leagues I play in. I look at playing fantasy football as an investment that Im making in myself. I put a lot of time into the process and we all know that time is valuable. Its really become a way for me to make income on the side and I play to make money and win. A really strange thing happened to me last season. I did absolutely awful! Out of ten leagues, I only made the playoffs in two. I was close to making the playoffs in a few other leagues, but close is for losers and thats what I was. I knew why I was losing, because the teams that I had sucked, but I was more interested in the how? How did I get to where I was? I went over my preseason notes that I make on each team and each draft worthy player to try to gain some insight on what went wrong. Hell, I even stayed up at night going over my drafting strategy over and over again. I then talked to my other big money league competitors who did well and searched for what I was missing. My conclusion is that I listened to too many damn people! Everyone now has a blog, podcast, twitter account, and a forum where they give their expert opinion on fantasy football. In the dog days of July and August when there isnt anything going on in sports, I start my planning for the upcoming season. This year I read, listened to, and saw everything that was put out there. From the Wait on Quarterback Approach, to Streaming Defenses, and Dont worry about tight ends, you can always grab one, I realized its all bullshit. If anyone can predict the future, they would be rich, and probably not be writing about fantasy football. Some of my serious players subscribe to the idea of only listening to one guy for their information. The problem with that is if they are wrong, then you are going to be wrong too. And lets not forget, no one knows the future so dont pretend anyone does. So whats the solution? Im glad you are reading this, because Im here to help. Im going to show you a foolproof way to succeed at playing fantasy football without listening to anyone. Its not a hard plan to put into place and Ill show you the steps and rules needed to win.
