

The Daily Fantasy Playbook (2015): Get Started and Make Money Playing Daily Fantasy Football

FULLY UPDATED FOR 2015. From the minds at 4for4 Fantasy Football (<http://www.4for4.com>), long known for their forecasting accuracy, comes the Daily Fantasy Playbook. Chris Raybon and Josh Moore team up to bring you everything you need to know to get started making money in the fastest growing sector in fantasy sports history. Winning in the NFL boils down to which team can execute their weekly game plan better. The DNA for these gameplans is often established months, even years, in advance, and is all contained inside perhaps the most sacred item in the NFL: the playbook. Since knowing the playbook is a prerequisite to being able to successfully execute your teams weekly game plan, studying it during the offseason is crucial, as there will be no time during the weekly grind of the season.

Daily Fantasy Sports (DFS) is very similar. Each DFS site (such as FanDuel, DraftKings, Fantasy Aces, etc.) has a salary cap, and your goal is to assemble the highest scoring group of players for that week only that fit within the cap. Therefore, each week you need a game plan for constructing the best lineup given the matchups and player salaries. Most of your time during the season is best spent researching players, analyzing salaries, keeping up with new developments, and ultimately crafting lineups. But you'd better know your playbook too. Think of your DFS playbook as a collection of strategies, philosophies, and overarching concepts that you draw from throughout the season to create the best possible lineups each week and gain an edge on the field. This book is divided up into two main parts: The Quickstart Guide is intended to get you signed up, deposited and playing quickly. Think of it as a 10,000 foot view into ideal beginner game selection and bankroll management. We'll give you a blueprint to minimize risk while building your bankroll and becoming familiar with the finer details of daily fantasy football. The Positional Strategy Framework gets into the nuts and bolts of lineup creation, going position by position (QB, RB, WR, TE, K, DEF) to answer the following questions: -How volatile is the position, and how does this dictate how much salary we should allocate towards it? -Which statistic(s) are the most relevant? -How do the different types of game situations influence the likelihood of scoring fantasy points? -How can I extract value and construct winning lineups?
