

Healthy Aging: The Keys of Healthy Living

Here is a compilation of easy-to-read abstracts from cutting edge scientific research into the causes of aging and some key nutritional-antioxidant approaches to slowing down the aging process and living a happier, healthier life. Edited by medical journalist Karla S. Rugh, D.V.M., this anthology was gathered together from research papers presented at the 9th Congress of the International Association for Biomedical Gerontology in Vancouver, BC, Canada, 2001. Including abstracts of papers presented by Nobel Prize-winning scientist Dr. Denham Harman, M.D., Ph.D., and other leading anti-aging research scientists from around the world, this reader-friendly book offers hope to everyone for increasing the span of his or her healthy, productive lives. An amazing amount of timely new information!
